

Brighton Standard Blade

MAY 3, 2003

Keller Williams Realtors bowl to raise money for junior achievement

More than 60 Keller Williams Realtors threw strikes and spares to raise more than $2,600 for Junior Achievement's largest fundraiser, the Strike for Education Bowl-a-thon. Keller Williams is a sponsor of the annual event in which more than 4,000 bowlers throughout the Front Range participate.

Junior Achievement gives young people an important head start and strong foundation with economic education, workforce readiness, appreciation for lifelong learning and a desire to stay in school. The money raised throughout the event funds classroom programs for more than 70,000 Colorado students.

"Keller Williams is proud to be a Junior Achievement sponsor," says the company's regional director Rich McCarthy. "As a company, we always look for win-win partnerships, and Junior achievement provides a successful bridge between education and business. Just as Keller Williams supports lifetime learning for our Realtors, we are committed to helping our kids develop career skills and understand the importance of business to our community."

With more than 17,000 agents nationwide and franchised market centers in 45 states and provinces, Keller Williams Realty International (KWRI) is America's sixth largest residential real estate company. Keller Williams Realty franchised the Colorado Region in 1991, and has succeeded by creating a unique agent-focused model that builds partnerships between agents and local ownership through participation in a life-long, profit-sharing program.

In Colorado, Keller Williams has 21 locations with more than 1,800 agents. For more information about Keller Williams, call the Colorado Regional office at 303-793-3888 or visit the Web site at www.gokellerwilliams.com. For information about Junior Achievement and its programs, call Dave Alleman, vice president of special events at 303-534-5252.